Nancy Wynne Tells of Change in Miss Harris' Debut Plans—Miss Geary to Be Introduced at a Tea. The Latest Kind of Fur Used in Paris

A Popular Matron

MRS. CHANNING WAY Mrs. Way, whose delightful informal parties are most enjoyable, spends most of her time at her home in West Chester

I WAS sorry to hear of the death of Mrs. Andrews Harris, mother of Mrs. Andrews Harris, Jr., which occurred about a week ago. She had not been well through the winter of last year and when Mrs. Harris, Jr., went abroad to join Georgiana and bring her home from school in Paris, Mrs. Harris decided not to go. They took Mrs. Harris up to their cottage in Northeast...

THE very latest, positively latest, thing for gowns this year (and it's to be used for caps, collars as well) is rabbit's skin. It's perfectly true and, of course, the French have introduced it. And what is more, some of the smartest of our women who are coming from Europe have frocks with and fur as trimming. The thrifty French have discovered by feeding a rabbit extremely well and keeping him in a very clean and airy place, his fur becomes soft and silky and rich. So now they feed "Brother Rabbit" as carefully as "Brother Pet Doodle" and after they have fed the former, they kill him and cure his skin. Then they dye it to match the frock with which it is to be worn.

I saw a stunning get-up recently of soft beige fur, with a little top cape of the same material finished at the neck with a wide band of fur dyed the same shade as the cape and dress. It really was stunning, so soft and in appearance, and if they stick to soft colors like beige and gray and browns it will be still stunning, but until I see and see that it is good, I prefer not to think about purple, blue, green or red furs, don't you?

THE rush for home is starting at the railway stations today; it started last night for that matter. For a little commuter that I am, I was nearly smothered in the avalanche of returning Philadelphia from the seashore and mountains as I tried to find my little blue train on its track out about Seventeenth street.

Besides tennis the first social affair of the season will be Helen Sewell's wedding which will take place in the morning, you know, at the Church of the Saviour, Jenkintown. Helen will make a dazzling bride with her wonderful fair hair and complexion. Her engagement to Henry Core, Jr., was announced during the winter.

Henry was in the World War, though he was very young. He was graduated from Harvard in 1920 and has been engaged in business in this city since then. He will give a dinner for his ushers on Thursday evening and the Sewells will give a buffet supper for the bridal party after the rehearsal on Friday evening.

VIRGINIA is four and, while fearless in the dark and of most things other children mind, she has a real terror of caterpillars. The other day conversation going on in the garden beside of her window, and she peeped out to see Virginia standing against the fence with her skirts held back and her face quite white, and on the path before her a small caterpillar. "Please," Virginia was saying, "please, if you don't mind going the other way so I can go in the house, I'll let you have the garden all afternoon."
